General notes

Social security falls within the scope of the Ministry in charge of social affairs (with the exception of "unemployment" which comes under the Ministry of Employment and Labour).

The National Social Security Office is a public institution that collects social security contributions (except those relating to occupational accidents) and allocates funds to the central institutions responsible for administering the various branches of social security.

This Office and the institutions responsible for the different branches are run by a Management Committee which includes an equal number of representatives of employer and employee organisations while other members may include representatives of organisations with an interest or involvement in a specific branch of insurance.

The key role of the National Institute for Sickness and Invalidity Insurance, responsible for sickness, maternity and invalidity benefits, is to distribute financial resources between the different insurance funds responsible for benefit delivery (mutual insurance companies, which are affiliated to one of the five national associations of recognised mutual insurance companies, regional office of the Auxiliary Sickness and Invalidity Fund or the Health Care Fund of the Belgium National Railway Company). The choice of insurance fund is free, except for employees of the Belgium National Railway Company.

The National Pension Office pays old age and survivor pensions through its network of local offices throughout the country.

Employers must take out cover for occupational accidents with registered insurance companies or joint insurance funds. The Occupational Accident Fund can provide compensation in case employers default on their obligations, while it also conducts technical, medical and financial inspections. The Occupational Disease Fund has a similar role with respect to occupational disease insurance.

Family benefits are paid out by different compensation funds (e.g. for an occupation, or employer) under the auspices of the National Office for Employees' Family Allowances. The National Employment Office and its regional units decide on individual entitlement to unemployment benefit. Payments are made by the registered trade union organisation to which the employee is affiliated or by the Auxiliary Fund for Payment of Unemployment Benefit that received the application.

Municipal Public Social Assistance Centres are responsible for means-tested social assistance payments and other social services.

The individual country notes of the OECD Benefits and Wages (www.oecd.org/social/benefits-and-wages.htm) provide a comprehensive description of characteristics of social programmes (e.g. conditions for receipt, calculation of payment rates, tax treatment of social support, benefit duration, etc.) for the working-age population, including: unemployment insurance and assistance, social assistance, employment-conditional benefits, housing benefits, family benefits, childcare support, and support for sole parent households.

Break in series

Data for 1990 onwards are based on the new ESSPROS methodology format. Coherent spending series for 1980 onwards at the individual programme level were obtained on basis of information for a few years in the early 1990s for which both historical spending series and information based on the new ESSPROS format were available. A major change in scheme classification was also performed from 1995 onwards. For certain programmes and aggregate categories, breaks in series (between 1989 and 1990, and between 1994 and 1995) were inevitable. In general, inactive programmes were set “missing” when not appropriate.

Health Data refer to OECD Health Statistics since 2003 and to estimates from 2002 backwards from previous national accounts health spending series.

Data for Public health before 1992 refer the total health spending function (HC1-HC9, HCR1) as the split in current health spending (HC1-HC9) into the financing schemes is only from 1992 on.

Data for Private health insurance before 2003 refer the total health spending function (HC1-HC9, HCR1) as the split in current health spending (HC1-HC9) into the financing schemes is only from 2003 onwards.

Secretariat estimates: No
